

Set Up Independent Practitioner Profiles

Source: Mike Martin, GBPLY (gbply.net), on Unscripted SEO · "Some of our agencies have almost doubled in size just off the back of setting up independent practitioner profiles for experts."

Objective

One Google Business Profile for the organization plus one for each client-facing professional, each linked to that person's own page on the website. A physio clinic went from 1 profile to 6. A law firm with 15 lawyers could run 16.

Key Steps

1. List every client-facing professional. Doctors, dentists, lawyers, financial planners, insurance or real estate agents who are at the premises during working hours and can be asked for by name. No support staff.
2. Check the organization profile first. Complete, and mirroring the website: name, address, hours, categories, services. (inferred order)
3. Build a page per practitioner on the website, one URL each under their own name, with title, specialty and hours.
4. Create one profile per practitioner, named as the person ("XYZ Esquire", "Dr. Jane Smith"). Titles and degrees are allowed; the firm name is not.
5. Link each profile to its own page. The organization profile links to the main site; each practitioner profile links to their page.
6. Set hours per location for anyone working at more than one practice: one profile per practice, each with its own hours.
7. Verify, then run the GBP loop on every profile: completeness and mirroring, pictures, posts, praise. Every month. "It doesn't have an end date."

Cautionary Notes

- One profile per practitioner per location. No extra profiles per specialty.
- Only public-facing professional at a branded location? One shared profile: "Brand: Name".
- Sales associates, lead-gen agents and support staff are not eligible.
- Untested outside the professions Google names (Mike would not call tattoo artists).
- Do not show an address for someone who serves customers off-site.

Tips for Efficiency

- Find the gap: a firm that ranks number one but has no practitioner profiles is the fastest win.
- Run setup as a 30-minute working session, the way Mike does with agencies.
- Collect name, title, photo, page URL, phone line and hours for everyone in one sheet. (inferred)
- Track each profile's spread with a map grid rank tracker (GBPLY has 10 free scans a month).
