Run X as Off-Page SEO and Check What Google and AI Learned

Objective

Your profiles claimed on the platforms that matter, a daily feed of what Google indexes about you, and a monthly read on whether ChatGPT and Google's AI Overviews pick up the words you publish. The technical work on your own site is on-page; everything else is off-page SEO.

> "SEO is words, and words are SEO." - Bridget Willard, Bridget Willard, LLC

Key Steps

1. Claim the big four profiles: Facebook, Instagram, LinkedIn and Twitter, plus YouTube if you can. "You just can't afford to escape the big four."
2. Pick the two you'll actually work. For B2B: "LinkedIn, Twitter, hands down." Treat each handle as a URL.
3. Set a Google Alert on your name (and the client's brand) at google.com/alerts. Each alert shows a post Google picked up.
4. Search your name and open the News tab. Note which posts appear there. Bridget found her tweets listed as news.
5. Publish in public and stay for the replies. Move to DMs only when someone asks. "You can't just post and ghost."
6. Feed what you publish back to ChatGPT: screenshots of posts, PDFs, "anything that I publish."
7. Ask Google's AI Overviews in an incognito window and note whether your name or phrasing comes back. (log inferred)
8. Turn every video into a transcript. "Transcripts from videos are gold."

Cautionary Notes

- No DM pitch on first contact. Keep it public until they ask.
- Staff the account with someone who knows the industry and is there for the replies.
- Only replies, profile visits and engagement carried over in X analytics. Lurkers don't show up.
- SERP features for tweets come and go. Re-check the News tab monthly.
- AI checks are a spot check, not a ranking report. Same questions, same place, each month. (inferred)

Tips for Efficiency

- Ask of every profile: is it crawlable, is the link discoverable, is the text digestible?
- Client won't post? Check the industry culture first. Compliance teams script what should be impromptu.
